July 1853

Mrs [illegible]

[illegible] are [illegible]
[illegible] I will [illegible] [illegible] Sue [illegible] [illegible] because [illegible]
[illegible] is not [illegible] [illegible] "Do come [illegible] to Boston, for [illegible] can write [illegible] She [illegible] dear
[illegible] there [illegible] together the [illegible] dear
[illegible] is not [illegible] Some [illegible] Came [illegible] Mamma
[illegible] Mamma
[illegible] Mamma

cause. She is full of wit & sensibility with a great deal of sagacity & good sense; but entirely destitute knowledge & experience as regards the cause, & of course often liable to be mistaken. But her heart is right, & therefore such mistakes are of comparatively little consequence. She did not know till she reached us, & saw it, that there was such a paper as the Standard; Thompt Garrison's was the organ of the Am. A.S. Soc; Thompt the Glasgow Misses' new Society was formed after & in consequence of having read "Uncle Tom:" & so on & so on. But I firmly believe she would go to the stake for the cause, & can no more help being deeply interested in all who are devoted to it than you or I can. Her opinions are all in a state of fusion as regards politics & history I should think it unfair as well as indelicate in any of our true abolitionists friends to quote them, Her progress will be slow, I should think, not because of any reluctance to see the truth or want of love for it, but because of her very feeble health, & because of the nature of the department of Labour which she has undertaken. She writes a letter but rarely & while writing a novel, one cannot be studying history, or reflecting profoundly. But feeling so rightly & so deeply, all will eventually be right. She is in no such state of mind as Douglass is in about colored schools, or as S. Stuge is about free labour. She is a good bright sincere soul whom we all love cordially, & not in the least should by the hom